learning and development

AUSTRALIAN INSTITUTE OF TRAINING AND DEVELOPMENT

ABOUT AITD

The AITD was established in 1971 to address the specific needs of trainers in Australia. Back then, the need was simple – to form a network of contacts in a diverse industry. Today the scope of training, learning and development is more complex. The importance of learning to organisational performance is widely recognised, professional qualifications exist for trainers, and new methods continued to grow, especially with the use of technology and the internet.

With over 35 years of experience and reputation the AITD remains focused on supporting our members' professional learning and networking needs.

We aim to:

- ▶ provide professional development programs, seminars and conferences
- ▶ support members to develop their skills and capabilities
- ▶ facilitate networking with other training, learning and development professionals
- ▶ provide members with access to relevant, high quality information, research and knowledge
- ▶ promote the value of learning & education, and our profession, to government, the community and business.

AITD is a founding member of the International Federation of Training and Development Organisations (IFTDO) and the Asian Regional Training and Development Organisation (ARTDO).

WHY JOIN?

The Australian Institute of Training and Development (AITD) is the association of choice for professionals in training, learning and development.

Our mission is to be a leader in fostering excellence, innovation and professional integrity in training, learning and development for the workplace.

By being a member you will belong to a professional body dedicated to the same goals.

The three strands of the value of AITD membership are summed up in our motto:

Innovate

Build your knowledge of the latest approaches to developing the capabilities of people and organisations. The field of training, learning and development is one that is rapidly changing, with new methods and new challenges arising all the time.

Learn

By joining AITD you demonstrate your commitment to the profession and gain access to a range of professional development activities. Membership entitles you to apply for AITD's Accredited Practitioner status.

Connect

Joining AITD will enable you to establish a network of professional peers and contacts. Attend local and national events, become involved in special interest groups, visit AITD Online at www.aitd.com.au and become listed in the AITD database of trainers and consultants, the listing of "who's who" in the field of training, learning and development.

Becoming a member of the AITD is a clear signal to clients, employers, and peers that you are committed to maintaining and growing your professional relevance.

MEMBER BENEFITS

Membership with AITD provides you with a range of benefits that will enable you to hone your skills, connect with your professional community and keep pace with developments in the L&D industry.

► Professional development

Increase your knowledge of training and learning methods and the issues impacting on field, by participating in regular state-based professional development activities, networking sessions, national conference and national learning and development workshops.

► Publications

Membership includes subscription to AITD's Training and Development in Australia magazine, enabling you to keep up-to-date with Australian and global trends and issues in training and people development.

► News

A regular email newsletter, Snippets, goes out to members. It contains news items about AITD and developments in the field, and links back to the AITD website and to other online articles and items of interest.

► Networking

Make personal contacts and establish links with other professionals working in training, learning and development through AITD's local, national and global networks. Membership includes access to AITD's Find-a-Trainer database.

► AITD online

Access information online via www.aitd.com.au including information on upcoming events, member services, contacts, articles on training and learning issues and a discussion forum where members can gain opinions and ideas from other members.

► National Training Excellence Awards

Take the opportunity to be recognised for the innovation and excellence of your new program or initiative through AITD's annual National Training Excellence Awards.

► Professional Recognition

Seek professional recognition through AITD's Accredited Practitioner status.

► Discounts

Savings on a range of professional products and services are available to AITD members. AITD partners for this program are chosen on the strength of their reputation for the quality and value of their products and services. For comprehensive details on our member benefits visit www.aitd.com.au.

► Visibility

AITD members are encouraged to display the AITD logo on their CV, stationery & website. It is a recognisable signal that you keep up-to-date with your industry.

CODE OF PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE

AITD values integrity and ethical conduct for all individuals working within training, learning and human resource development.

AITD members commit to abide by a Code of Ethics and Professional Practice.
