

eLearning is more than an online module produced by an authoring tool – it includes webinars, social and collaborative learning, self guided/informal learning and more.

This online course will model best practice as you work your way through the learning process, engaging with the content, the trainer and other participants. Structured over eight weeks with facilitated online content, discussions and webinars this course will give you the essential knowledge that you've been looking for as well as options to extend and dig deeper into specific content areas of your choice.

If you're interested in eLearning and its possibilities, considering taking some of your content into eLearning format, or you're already doing eLearning and want to consolidate and stretch your knowledge, then this course is for you.
